

CHRISTIAN

“I travel a lot in my job and often have to stay overnight in a hotel. In my free time, I enjoy being together with my family and living close together with them in our motor home. It doesn’t matter if it’s a trip to the lake, an overnight stay at the parents-in-law or a weekend with close family – together we’ve forged so many shared memories that we lovingly count our home on four wheels as the fifth family member. We’ve integrated our impressions of some places into the color concept of our mobile home. For example, light woods that remind us of the reed beds on the coast or cool shades of blue and green that are found in the mountain lakes here.”

LEISURE

Especially young couples with children often rediscover the passion that their parents and grandparents had, as soon as they start a family themselves. Suddenly, their own memories flood back, of their childhood in a cozy camper, with their siblings in the bedroom above the driver’s cabin, and their parents sleeping very close by within safe reach. A feeling of security and home.

In addition, mobility and flexibility are valued. The fact that you’re ready for any situation and always have the most important things with you: in a flash, your mobile home turns into your living room, playroom or cozy reading corner while your children are taking an afternoon nap. Feel closely connected with each other and right among nature at all times. Discovering the world with all your senses and imparting your children with values such as community, a life with fewer material possessions, and the priceless value of freedom, independence and shared memories.

COLOR & MATERIAL

This requires storage space, clear, light shades that underline living spaces and allow space for naturalness. Scandinavian-looking, discreet wood decors with a light texture, such as Tropea Oak, create both a sense of space and feel-good atmosphere. A combination of plain surfaces in white, anthracite, pastel shades in blue with a classic, timeless stone look, such as Grey Caspio, create a harmonious world of color.

TROPEA OAK 10127

GREY CASPIO 54167

TROPEA OAK
10127 - L 195976