

MICHAEL

"I am lucky to be able to work anywhere in the world where I can find a stable Internet connection. I have made a conscious decision for a flexible, mobile lifestyle in which work and adventure can flow one into the other. This way I live the independence I have always longed for. The fact that I can easily do my job while traveling gives me a security. My caravan is many things to me at the same time: multifunctional living space, workplace, sometimes a bit of a Zen monastery and of course a means of transport. My caravan takes me to the most remote parts of the world. At the moment I'm mostly drawn to silence. Nature, forest, mountains, lots of green, activity! I wake up in the most beautiful places in the world and start the day with the relaxed feeling of a good work-life balance."

WORK ON THE GO

Digitization has produced a new type of person: the digital nomads. People like this work in virtual work structures and can do this remotely – with the right mobile setup and a little bit of planning – regardless of where they live. They go their own way and make the dream of adventure come true. They are happy to leave the familiar behind, because they know that they will be rewarded with a wealth of exciting stories.

The digital nomads' motor home is an instrument of freedom, fluidity, and enables creative, new lifestyles. However, it has to reliably address multiple challenges of mobile life and work. Before modern nomads set off on their journey, they adjust their individual expectations of technology, functionality, comfort, design and storage space to their lifestyle of activity, performance, sport, relaxation and meeting new people.

COLOR & MATERIAL

In order to be able to realize their dream of freedom, mobile nomads like Michael opt for a clean minimalism, the great luxury of which is almost invisible in the multi-functional approach. The colors of the interior are kept in tranquil, dark greens and strengthen the connection between inside and outside. Metal decors such as Flash provide powerful contrasts to young, fresh wood decors with a great play of colors – such as Imperia Pear Tree. Rochefort Walnut and Amberwood anchor the mobile nomad in the here and now and also work really well with metal. Textile decors such as Kalamos or Duna create a cozy atmosphere and provide an inspiration for work.
