

ALEXANDER & RUTH

"It was clear to us that as soon as our children left home, we'd go traveling. Regardless of external factors – we set off and go wherever we feel like. This incredibly enriches us as a couple. We've always shared a passion for foreign cultures, and today we can fully indulge in our hobby and experience so many exciting things to tell our family when we're back home."

THE PATH IS THE GOAL

Getting to know the country and its people in detail, immersing yourself in everyday life abroad, and adapting. Take the enrichment of foreign impressions with you, let them flow into your own being, and let them change you and enrich your lives. It's often not important where the journey is heading – the path is the goal.

And on this path, there's so much to experience and discover. Without pressure of time, the mobile home quickly becomes the main residence, reflecting the impressions and achievements of worlds and places that are no longer foreign. It tells a story.

New impressions, aromas, people and customs inspire you to get to new destinations and stages. These travelers want to remain active and consciously engage with their surroundings.

COLOR & MATERIAL

Warm, earthy colors and dark woods such as oak or cedar decors mix with various materials, patterns and souvenirs. Shades such as red and brown in combination with light white vases and accessories on surfaces with stone decors create a cozy overall atmosphere that lasts. The cultural heritage of the traveled landscapes gushes into the caravan. The warm, earthy shades convey a sense of security – you're on the road but you've already arrived.
