THE PERFECT SURFACE IN JUST 4 STEPS

Appealing surfaces are essential to any successful interior design: they define the style of furniture, panels and flooring. We print decors for our customers using rotogravure or digital printing processes. We hope that the following graphic provides you with some insight into our work.

1

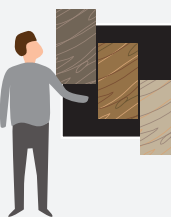

DESIGN

Our international design team and decor development constantly identify new trends in order to develop innovative designs for our customers.

Different types of wood, stone, fabrics and metals serve as inspiration for our numerous decor ideas.

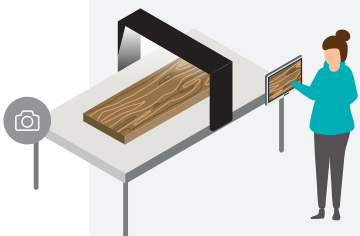

Once a year we publish an exclusive design trend book featuring the primary design trends of tomorrow.

! Our design and trend expertise enables us to provide our customers with professional advice when selecting the perfect decor. In this process, we focus on the individual needs and requirements of the customer.

2

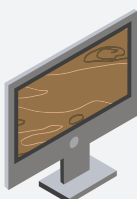

DECOR DEVELOPMENT

We use a variety of originals to develop decors and then create high-resolution digital templates from scans of the original material.

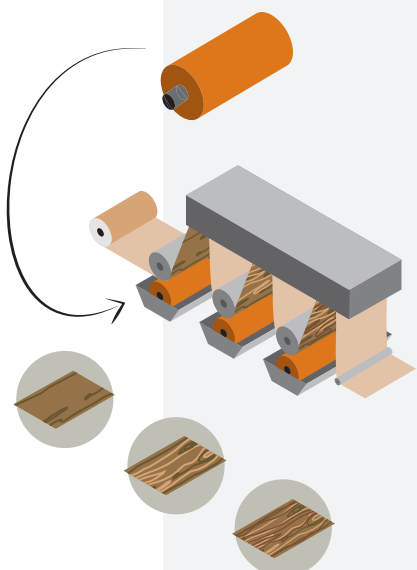

These unique, high-quality images serve as the basis for decor development.

The templates are specially prepared for rotogravure or digital printing processes.

3'

ROTOGRAVURE PRINTING

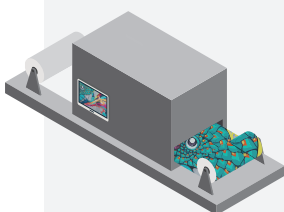

In rotogravure printing, engraved cylinders apply premixed inks to the paper via an impression roller. Up to four cylinders are used for particularly complex patterns.

DIGITAL PRINTING

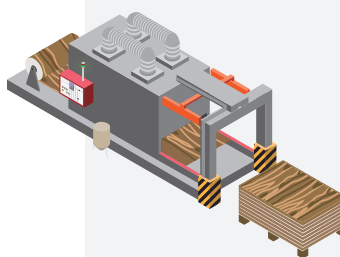

With digital printing, Schattdecor offers completely new worlds of possibilities in decor printing. For example the pattern repeat length is no longer limited to the cylinder circumference. The Palis 2250 single-pass system prints with the four main colors red, yellow, blue and black, plus an optional fifth color. The pigments are identical to those used in rotogravure printing. As a result, many decors can be created using both rotogravure and digital printing processes and are practically indistinguishable from each other.

! As a production process, digital printing is not intended to replace gravure printing in the future. Instead, it is more of a complement and brings with it new possibilities.

IMPREGNATION

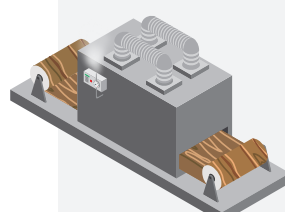

At this stage, the printed decor paper receives an application of a melaminic resin by an immersion process. Thanks to our comprehensive technological expertise, our customers are able to achieve an ultra-robust surface finish for furniture, countertops, interior fittings and floors.

LACQUERING

During the lacquering process, printed papers with different grammages or pre-impregnated papers receive a fine layer of lacquer. This gives us the opportunity to create various optical and haptic effects and offer innovative and durable surface finishings developed specifically to meet the needs of discerning customers.
